The Magic Ring Backstage

Behind the heavy red curtain of the Grand Oak Theatre, a group of stagehands worked quietly. They moved props, checked lights, and swept the wooden stage before the evening show. The theatre was old, and its walls held many stories from long ago.

One afternoon, while cleaning a dusty storage room, the stagehands found a small wooden box. Inside the box lay a gold ring that sparkled in the dim light. Etched inside the ring were tiny stars. No one knew where the ring came from, but the stagehands felt it was special.

That night, as the show began, everything went smoothly. The lights turned on at the right time, the curtains opened perfectly, and no props were misplaced. The stagehands realized the ring had brought a bit of magic to their hard work. They decided to keep it safe and remember that teamwork made the show shine.
